

9 out of 10

women who have been sexually assaulted do not report to the police,¹ and false allegations are rare.²

yet

42%

of Australians believe it is common for sexual assault accusations to be used as a way of getting back at men.

